

DocInsight AI Report

Document: The 48 Laws Of Power (PDFDrive.com).pdf

Words: 11453

Characters: 65966

Sentences: 709

Reading Time: 53 min min

AI Summary

The provided text serves as the front matter and comprehensive bibliography for the book 'The 48 Laws of Power,' authored by Robert Greene and produced by Joost Elffers. It details the professional background of Robert Greene, highlighting his expertise in classical studies and his career in publishing, and identifies Joost Elffers as a key producer of the work. The document establishes the publication history, noting its initial release in 1998 in both Great Britain and the United States, with subsequent paperback printings in the early 2000s. It explicitly outlines copyright protections, asserting the authors' moral rights and prohibiting the reproduction or transmission of the content without formal authorization. A significant portion of the document is dedicated to listing the diverse sources utilized by the authors, which include historical texts, classic literature, fables, and philosophical works ranging from Plutarch and Herodotus to Machiavellian studies and various folklore collections. This extensive reference list underscores the interdisciplinary nature of the book, which synthesizes historical anecdotes and strategic wisdom to articulate laws governing power dynamics. The document is strictly informational, providing the legal and scholarly foundation for the book's contents while maintaining the formal requirements of a publication record.

Keywords

POWER, LAW, page, University Press, LAWS, make, people, Penguin Books, MASTER, time